A good team made the difference ~ Euphonus 2k13

Ten days prior to the event, we did not know of a festival being organized this year. The focus was on the 3 day International Conference and most of the students had started telling their hearts to forget about the fest and divert itself. Yes the whole “Aaj phir dil ne ik tamanna ki, Aaj phir humne dil ko samjhaya” sort of a thing. But as fate would have it, the magnificent college management team decided to go on with the students demand. And why not, I mean what is 2 extra days of effort to the young at heart visionaries and young at age students.

The Electronics and Communications department also, as everready as always, accepted the challenge and worked towards the success of the event. Four events were finalized- RoboMania (The classic event of Robotics), Couple KiteFight (What stood out as a showstopper), Swaravali (Superb blend of music and innovation) and Tarde Fiesta (A cluster of numerous small events). How did the guys manage? What were their experiences? And any handy tips for the juniors who will be organizing next year? We asked all of this to the EC faculty incharges and the students as well.

“Most of the students were involved in some way or the other, everyone was on the same boat facing the same difficulties. No one had the time to criticize others. That led to controversy-free 10 days of pure work.”

Mr. Pankaj Sahu

(Faculty Co-ordinator)
(EUPHONUS 2k13)

“Definitely it seemed difficult. The whole primary focus was on the conference but a tech fest is also not something that can be handled as a secondary thing. However, we always knew we will do it and will do it good. After all, we are engineers.” Said Mr. Raj Tiwari (Faculty Co-ordinator, Euphonus 2k13) when asked about his first reaction about organizing the events. Another key man behind the incredible success, Mr. Pankaj Sahu who was also a faculty co-ordinator, gives all credit to the extensive involvement of the team he put up for the job. “See when you are dealing with this kind of a situation, you need a team. And We just had the right people doing the right job all the way.”

When asked further about the problems that might occur usually, he said- “Usually the problem that occurs most is of disputes within the students. But it can be solved by letting many people do it. Since most of the students were involved in some way or the other, everyone was on the same boat facing the same difficulties. No one had the time to criticize others. That led to controversy-free 10 days of pure work.”

The ideas put up by the faculty seemed to work pretty well. Devanshu Chatterji, Student Co-ordinator for Swaravali said- “Everyone was dedicated to make each event a success and hence we had less work and more people to do it. Who has time for disputes when all are working?” The result of this led to ONE unanimous effort for ONE succesfull event as a whole.

To sum it up, The whole key to success was the approach of one inclusive and succesfull event rather than 4 different approaches to 4 different events. If Divide and Rule was the ANGREJI way, then Unite and Rule is the EC way to success.
